

Best Wishes for a Happy Easter and Happy Passover

For many of us this is a joyous time of year, not just because of the holidays but because the days are longer, the grass is greener and flowers, plants and trees are starting to burst forth!

Right now I have hundreds, maybe even thousands, of daffodils in our yard and garden and their brightness is wonderful, even on a cloudy or rainy day!

Last weekend, one week before Easter, I had a day of Laughter, Joy and Pride. Why? Because I got to spend time with my two children Michele and Tony--and we were working together.

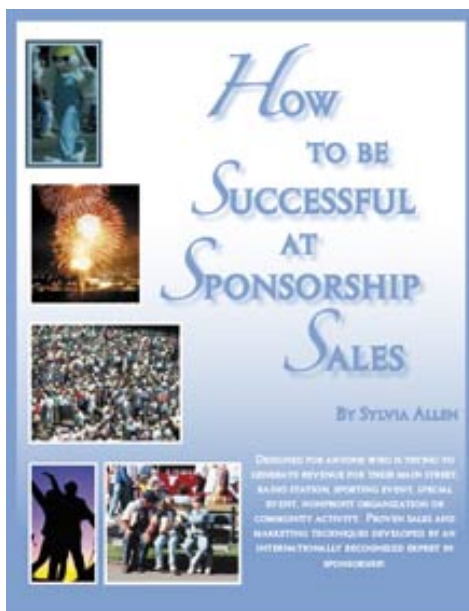

We needed to pick up bags of clothing for recycling at St. Leo's Church--a project I usually do myself. This time, because I have tendonitis (and can hardly walk), I asked them if they would help. Each of them drives a truck so Tony said he would meet us at the agreed upon location while Michele was going to pick me up. Well, in order for me to get into the truck, I needed to raise my knee to my nose and then pole vault in! The next thing I know Michele has her hands cupped on my bottom because she was going to give me a "lift"! I said "I can do it myself!" at which point both of us started laughing. The joy, of course, just came from being together with my children, and the pride of who exactly they are and what they have become... each is a success in their own right. What more can a parent ask?!?

My best wishes to you and your family for Laughter, Pride and Joy!

Have a joyous Easter and happy Passover!
